The Charleston Beer Exchange Announces Moving Sale and Final Days Open at Current Location

Sale Begins October 5 With Deep Discounts and Special Tastings

CHARLESTON, SC – September 29, 2016–The Charleston Beer Exchange announced today the final days of operation in their current location and the details of the official Moving Sale.

Starting Wednesday, October 5, patrons can come purchase the remaining stock in the store at deep discounts. To kick things off, on Wednesday at 4:00 p.m., owner Scott Shor will be onsite along with Westbrook Brewing Company and Coast Brewing Co. pouring some very special offerings for free samples.

The groundbreaking date will be announced soon, and construction should be complete in early spring*. The new store, Edmund's Oast Exchange, will be over 2,000 square feet, two stories and is being designed by Andrew Gould of New World Byzantine. Edmund's Oast Exchange will continue to offer their incredible selection of craft beer with approximately 1,000 different varieties sold in cans, bottles, kegs, and growlers. It will also be the only location anywhere that patrons can buy beers produced at Edmund's Oast restaurant to go.

In addition to the top notch beer selection, the retail space will add a comprehensive wine collection. This will include everything from benchmark classics to fun finds from the young vanguard. An emphasis will be placed on wines that tell a story and sharing these stories with customers. Also included will be glassware, merchandise, and food items made at Edmund's Oast such as charcuterie. The expanded space will be used to host a full curriculum of beer and wine classes and tastings year round. Furthermore, the store's close proximity to the restaurant will allow for more collaborative events, such as dinners featuring winemakers and brewers. Edmund's Oast Exchange will be led by a stellar group of knowledgeable professionals including Certified Sommelier Sarah O'Kelley and Certified Cicerone® Brandon Plyler.

The store's relocation to the Half Mile North/NoMo area, is in addition to other recent openings and announcements of retail spaces and brings more convenient places for people to come to visit, shop, and dine.
